"I wanted him to think that I was going to commit suicide," she declared.

In spite of her statement, however, the police charge that the wife had taken refuge from her husband in the bathroom of their apartment, and that she had fired from her through the locked door.

The next followed two visits of the police to the building. About 10:15, Mr. Marshall, a Kinsland street, was passing through Bickelstaff street, heard a sound which was convinced was a pistol shot.

Both went to the apartment house at No. 15, entered and looked at the door of suite 3.

32 DEPUTIES FACE MURDER CHARGES

ROOSEVELT, N. J., Jan. 21.—Thirty-two sheriff's deputies charged with murder are in the Middlesex Court Jail in New Brunswick today, held without bail, as being responsible for the fatal shooting of strikers here Tuesday. Two of the employees of the American Agricultural Chemical Company died of gunshot wounds, after nearly a score had been hurt in a clash alleged to have been precipitated by deputies guarding the company's plants on that day.

Mayor Joseph A. Herman signed the complaints on which the deputies were arrested by a squad of uniformed policemen who came here in company of John R. Ferguson, a county detective.

Mayor Herman said: "We have done our full duty and this action will tend to show the strikers and others that they will have full protection. It will also be a lesson to the hired gunmen that they cannot in the future attack with impunity and shoot down defenseless men."

SAVE CHILDREN FROM FLAMES IN WORCESTER

WORCESTER, Jan. 21.—Through the heroism and cool-headedness of the sisters attached to St. Anne's Orphan Asylum, a serious panic was averted and 246 little children led to the street and safely to their homes when a fire broke out in the basement of the asylum building, a four-story wooden structure on Granite street.

The flames swept up as air shafts mushrooming out on the third and fourth stories, causing damage estimated at $4,000.

The fire had attained considerable headway before discovered by Sister Benedict. After notifying Sister St. John the Baptist, who is in charge of the asylum, Sister Benedict rushed from the building and sounded an alarm from a box on the grounds.

Under the leadership of Sister St. John, the Baptist, the other eighteen sisters in the building marshaled the children into line. In four minutes every child was safely out.

Upon their arrival on the scene the firemen found the two upper floors of the building a mass of flames. For a few minutes it looked as if the entire building was doomed. Prompt work, however, placed the blaze under control and the damage was confined to these floors.

Revoke License of South End Hall

Alleged improper conduct at dances held at No. 355 Harrison avenue, as reported to Mayor Curley by Police Commissioner O'Mara, resulted in the license of the hall being revoked. This license was held by Morris Pittman and was taken away solely on evidence furnished the Mayor by the police.

For over an hour a wrecker crew worked to remove the body. Mrs. Anna T. Steiner was arrested on a charge of manslaughter. Walsh was running to catch a car on the opposite track.

GERMANS MAKE FERCE ATTACK UPON BRITISH

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The Germans delivered a terrific onslaught against the British lines at Passburg, two miles southeast of Jassene, in an effort to pierce them, but according to the allied official advice the attacks were all successfully repulsed.

The allied report that the Germans contracted important forces in that district and that when all was prepared for the attack the Germans, following their custom, launched their troops in mass formations against the British positions. The British offered a magnificent resistance and inflicted considerable losses upon the enemy who perished in the attacks for several hours.

The Germans failed to achieve success, the War Office says, despite their superior numbers, and in the meantime the British received fresh reinforcements.

JEROME NOW SPEEDING BACK WITH MATTERMAN FUGITIVE; ARRIVES HERE THIS AFTERNOON

Harry K. Thaw left Concord, N. H., for Boston at 2:15 o'clock this afternoon, in charge of three triumphant William Travers Jerome.

The "man from Matamoras," who escaped from the New York prison section on August 11, 1911, was delivered into Jerome's charge in a two-minute hearing before Judge Edgar Aldrich of the United States District Court, sitting at Concord, just before noon.

Other than a slight blush, Thaw displayed no emotion when brought face to face with Jerome. Through the court hearing Thaw gave out fortitude at Jerome, but the two exchanged no words or other signs of recognition.

According to the schedule previously announced by Jerome, the party was to arrive in Boston at 10:10, accompanied by Sheriff Harry Jerome, Deputy Attorney-General Franklin Kennedy of New York State, Bernard Jacobs, his New Hampshire legal representative, and Captain John Lantry of the Manhattan police. The party stopped at the Radin Hotel until time to go to the court session in the federal building.

JEROME GETS HARRY. THAW

It then became necessary for Sheriff Thaw to go to a little morning. When he drew said, addressing himself: "I hereby surrender the custody of Harry K. Thaw to the custody of Sheriff Thomas F. Drew as State custodian."

By that time Sheriff Hornbeck of the county in which Mattawoman asylum is located stood across the room from Jerome's group and Sheriff Thaw surrendered the fugitive to him. Sheriff Hornbeck met Thaw for a minute or two while the New York officials were conferring with Clerk Madigan.

Sheriff Hornbeck's right arm is broken. It was in a sling today. Hornbeck extended his left hand to Thaw, who grasped it firmly with his right. It was the first time since Jerome and Thaw had met in nine months.

THAW REMAINS CALM.

After the proceedings, the prisoner and the New York officials walked to the Eagle Hotel a block away from the jail. It was snowing. Sheriff Thaw walked beside Thaw and Sheriff Hornbeck. Two police officers followed. Deputy General Kenney and Captain Langdon left the Federal building and walked to the Eagle Hotel.

Thaw's surrender today was dramatic in its simplicity. It was a trying ordeal for Thaw, but he made it as quick as possible and to avoid a joke or to greet an old friend as he was in the days before when he was a prisoner.

While Thaw and his party were waiting at Manchester, N. H. station for the 10:25 train to New York, a crowd fairly fought to get close to Thaw. The latter was surrounded by statements made by Jerome in New York, the night before last. The statements were good news to Thaw's mother. She was smiling and looking at his picture machine in the room.

GIVE MEMO PARFUMS.

Women pushed their way to the front, and an elderly one tried to kiss Thaw. He drew back respectfully and smiled when the woman laid in broken voice.

"I wanted to kiss you, but anyway I wish you luck and want you to remember me to your leave old mother."

Then men and women shook hands with Thaw and the train rumbled on in no time.

Thaw wore a blue suit, black overcoat, and a blue hat. He had a mustache and a goatee. He was looking at the crowd with a smile. He was looking at the crowd with a smile. He was looking at the crowd with a smile.

"I don't like to be disagreeable, but the presence of a professional strikebreaker in Mr. Jerome's party is a disgrace. I don't like to be disagreeable, but the presence of a professional strikebreaker in Mr. Jerome's party is a disgrace. I don't like to be disagreeable, but the presence of a professional strikebreaker in Mr. Jerome's party is a disgrace."

Thaw was given a perfume bottle at Manchester. His housekeeper, Mrs. Nellie Davidson, went at his departure. Thaw said to her: "Dear Mrs. Davidson, I'll be back soon."

The cook who has prepared Harry's meals at the temporary home, Mrs. Clement, was in the kitchen. She was looking at the crowd with a smile. She was looking at the crowd with a smile. She was looking at the crowd with a smile.

CROWD SEES TRAIN START.

Over 500 passengers, traveling men, photographers and movie men were at the depot, looking eagerly for Thaw. When Harry came tramping along the platform, with his long, swinging stride, there was a rush to see him.

When Thaw was told over the telephone by the Clerk that the train was ready to start, he made for the train. He was looking at the crowd with a smile. He was looking at the crowd with a smile. He was looking at the crowd with a smile.

HUNTING GERMAN SHIP NEAR ABER

LONDON, Jan. 22.—In the belief that an airship seen over Cromer last night was a German hydroplane sent on a scouting mission from a warship in the North Sea near the English coast, the Admiralty today ordered a closer patrol of the sea north of Dover. Two British destroyers left Dover at 4 o'clock this morning to search for the mysterious warship.

Jerome and his companions had come from New York to Boston, arriving at the South station at 2 p. m. The party hurried to the North station in Concord, where they will be held until the trial. The party was expected to trouble in the trial. The party was expected to trouble in the trial.

'DOUBLE KISSED' GIRL, SAYS FITZ

Former Mayor Fitzgerald, who took the stand in the "Tooled" attention trial to deny that he kissed Miss Elizabeth M. Ryan at the Percroft Inn, today declared that it was possible one of his "double" who has done the kissing.

The former Mayor, repeating his emphatic denial of ever having even kissed Miss Ryan, said that he had at least fifty "doublets" in different parts of Massachusetts. He thinks that at least five may have visited Percroft and kissed Miss Ryan, and may also have pretended he was "John F. Fitzgerald."

Meanwhile Harry K. Mansfield, proprietor of the inn, whom Miss Ryan is suing for $20,000 for alleged breach of promise to wed, has promised to give the court in writing the names of more than thirty prominent persons to whom he introduced Miss Ryan. If these names are made public, a sensation as great as that which came when the former Mayor was accused of a witness of having kissed Miss Ryan is expected to result.

Former Mayor Fitzgerald said today: "It is quite possible that one of my doublets, and I have fifty, visited Percroft Inn, and kissed Miss Ryan, and pretended he was 'John F. Fitzgerald.'"

"The successful man and the man of public life is always subject to such temptations. I would not wonder if I had kissed Miss Ryan, and pretended he was 'John F. Fitzgerald.'"

"It makes it very disagreeable to me to make my family, I hope, to know that I have kissed Miss Ryan, and pretended he was 'John F. Fitzgerald.'"

"It is an injustice to have my name brought into a gambling room where women and liquor abound. I never drink or smoke or gamble at all my friends know."

"When I was Mayor of Boston I was always most careful of my reputation. I never kissed Miss Ryan, and pretended he was 'John F. Fitzgerald.'"

"My habits were set an example for the younger men. I never kissed Miss Ryan, and pretended he was 'John F. Fitzgerald.'"

POLICE GENTLE, SAYS O'MEARA

"The notion that prisoners are made treated by Boston policemen owes its existence to tradition and to the reading of fiction," declares Police Commissioner O'Meara in his report for the year ending November 30, 1914, just sent to Governor Walsh. No reference is made to the Fenway conditions or the Chinatown situation, as those subjects have both been introduced since the end of the department year.

"The increase in population in ten years has been 35 per cent, and the increase in miscellaneous prosecutions in the same period has been 75 per cent. A legislator in another city would assume that there had been a growth of crime in Boston far in excess of the growth in population," says the report.

"NO ABUSE OF CITIZENS."
Under the heading, "Police Abuse," the Commissioner says:
Legislation such as the statute which requires that all injuries found on prisoners shall be reported is based on two erroneous theories.

The first erroneous theory is that the police are guilty of wanton abuse of citizens; the second is that such abuse, if existent, can be stopped by statute. The truth is that the chief cause of the men who compose a police force, the rules by which they are governed, and, above all, the trust pervading the whole police body are the only means by which the security of citizens from police abuse can be guaranteed.

The rules of the Boston Police Department have carried for eight years six printed pages of instructions to police officers as to the use of revolvers and clubs, and the conditions under which force may be employed. These instructions have been open to the public from the beginning; and as they have been so, it is not to be supposed that on the part of police officers such occurred the protection of citizens, as well as the maintenance of the dignity of the law. All instances of police use of revolvers with fatal results in the past eight years have been submitted to the courts, and such use has been justified. In two cases police officers were brought to trial for fatal shootings, and in both cases they were acquitted by juries in accordance with charges by the presiding justices. Whether or not the Boston police have obeyed these rules in a majority which can be fairly said. In the past eight years about a million arrests have been made in Boston, not counting cases in which juveniles were merely summoned to court. These arrests were made on duty at all hours of the day and night, armed with clubs and loaded revolvers. Of the men arrested more than half were drunk, and in thousands of cases violent and abusive, and a large percentage of all persons arrested were dangerous criminals.

"REMARKABLE RECORD."

As a consequence of these arrests, and of the relations of the police with the whole population, two policemen have been convicted of unfathomable assaults and have been discharged from the department; and two others have been discharged for offenses believed to have been the outgrowth of an assault upon a prisoner. None of these cases was a club, revolver or other weapon used, and in all instances the acts of the policemen resulted from outbreaks of temper provoked by abusive language.

It may be said that this remarkable record in view of the leniency on the part of the department towards such offenders, that a citizen who is assaulted by a policeman cannot secure justice from the police authorities; on the contrary, no other offense is punished more rigorously or punished more severely.

What a citizen negotiates there is a perfect arrest in addition to the arrest. A citizen who is assaulted by a policeman has a right to go to court and recover damages either with a criminal complaint for assault or with a civil suit for damages. But in eight years no Boston policeman has been convicted in any criminal court of assault or any other form of violence committed against a citizen, and no Boston policeman has received a dollar in civil damages by order of a court for any act of violence committed by him while in those eight years.

There have been a few instances, perhaps eight or ten, in which policemen have paid small sums in settlement of cases involving technical assault or unlawful arrest, but not actual bodily injury to the plaintiff.

What is the other side of the coin? In eight years more than 100 men have been shot dead by criminals, and a dozen have been killed for life by shooting or other violence. In the same period persons, out counting those who escaped, have been arrested for assaulting policemen, and 222 policemen while arresting criminals, and 39 other policemen while pursuing criminals have been injured to such an extent as to cause them to leave duty from date. No account is made of the numerous cases in which the injuries did not necessitate absence from duty.

HARVARD CHANGE FOR TIGER GAME

HOW THE TEAMS LINE UP.

PRINCETON. Jan. 22.—The Harvard team, which has been defeated by Princeton in the first game of the season, will meet the Tigers tonight in the second game of the season.

Harvard may start a changed line-up at the arena tonight in its second game. The Tigers, who were defeated by Princeton in the first game, will meet the Harvard team in the second game.

The Harvard team has worked hard all season in practice, but never at any part of it has the outfit from across the Charles displayed such earnest work in preparation as has for tonight's game.

The Crimson is stronger on second string. Players than the Tigers, and with the free substitution rule, it is believed that there will be one or two changes in the makeup of the seven this evening.

THE RABBIT'S COLUMN By Walter J. Murranville HORSTOP OF THE BRAVES

I have received a letter from a very prominent business man of Providence who saw Paul Hines perform his triple play about which there is so much controversy.

I want to say that this letter corresponds in facts with the story of the triple play. Mr. Murranville saw the play. He says it was years before the play was questioned.

These who say the play was not made by Hines' unassisted claim that Sweeney, the Providence second baseman, participated in the play, which would rob Hines of the honors.

The facts, as Mr. Murranville tells me, are that he saw the letter from the Providence business man printed below. They both say that after Hines had completed his play Sweeney yelled for him to throw the ball to him which Hines did and Sweeney caught it.

The Sweeney business, it would appear, is what has caused many persons who claim that Hines is entitled to credit for making the triple play unassisted.

The letter from the Providence business man follows: "I note the different statements of the triple play. I saw and remember well the play. With one out and a runner on first and second, a slow fly (that looked like a ball) was batted between center and left field. Hines was runner started for home. Hines running in from center field caught the ball low in his right hand, and could hardly keep or retain his balance. Before he touched third, and had not been running almost directly towards third when he caught the ball he could not have completed the triple play, as he could not have changed his direction in punting, as he had very hard work to keep his feet."

When Hines touched third with runner on first and second, which completed the triple play, the second baseman, mentioned for Hines to throw the ball to him, which Hines did do, and Sweeney did then touch second, but this was not for the three men were out on the second round. Hines, who was the official scorer of the game, is now in Providence and will remember the facts."

Lo Criger, the former battery partner of Cy Young, is reported to be coming to Boston in the last of the season. Criger has been in for several years, but has not been able to weather some severe attacks and he has now on another hard fight. Although of athletic physique, Criger caught Young's delivery for several years and helped to win pennants for the Boston Americans.

It was Criger who scored the deciding run in the pennant race of 1904. That was on the last day of the season, Boston and New York were tied at 83½, and it was to decide the flag. Criger was one game the Down East team was assured a 4½ percent. If New York won both games the championship would go to New York.

Criger pitched the first game for New York, and Dineen, the Boston twirler, the apothary was that cause of much argument in baseball circles, with Criger the most noted opponent of the most ball delivery. Criger's pitcher was mighty hard to hit. It was also very hard to base.

FEDS ATTACKED IN TRUST SUIT

CHICAGO, Jan. 22.—Organized baseball and the Federal League probably will know their fate in the big baseball "trust" suit today. After 22 1/2 days, counsel for the Federal League, who declared that a temporary injunction against the Federal League would destroy an institution which it had taken organized ball forty years to build.

In support of his charges, Miller cited instances in which he said the Federal League had signed players under contract with clubs in organized ball, the result of the Federal League contracts, he alleged, was the destruction of the trust.

There was no other outsider who could do it, and he said the Federal League had signed players under contract with clubs in organized ball, the result of the Federal League contracts, he alleged, was the destruction of the trust.

They tell me he was outrageous and even to the very last runners wouldn't move off third when the veteran was on the job.

It was not until the very last runners wouldn't move off third when the veteran was on the job.

Heinie Wagner entertains high hopes of taking his regular place in the Red Sox lineup when the game is first for the opening of the new baseball season. Wagner has been troubled by a curious ailment of his throwing arm.

BOSTON AMERICAN

10 AND 12 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, JAN. 23, 1915.

Boston Has the Best Letter-Writer Among All the Police Commissioners in the United States

Away Back in the Cranium of the Average Bostonian, However, Is the Notion That Something More Is Required of Police Commissioners Than Epistolary Excellence.

The Police Commissioner of Boston, who owes his appointment to the State House and bosses the police department of this town without being answerable to its citizens, has finally deigned to take notice of complaints that the Fenway is not properly protected by his department.

His Highness the Commissioner is apparently of the opinion that the Fenway is ADMIRABLY protected and that the expenditure of $2,500 for a patrol box would be MONEY THROWN AWAY.

So THAT settles THAT.

Mr. Commissioner excels at LETTER-WRITING. One paragraph from his column on "Why We Shall Take No Notice of Public Ciamor" is interesting. We print it here conspicuously:

"The single real crime of the year in the Fenway and Riverway section was the snatching of a handbag from a young lady who was VISITING FROM ANOTHER CITY, and as that crime was committed after the recent agitation had begun it might reasonably be surmised that the criminal was attracted to the place by the reports which he had read."

Observe that this was the single REAL crime of the year. Matrons of some of the college dormitories tell of young college girls rushing white faced into the houses in the early dusk, after pursuit by degenerates. These are not REAL crimes. Perhaps an assault would be considered a real crime, or mayhap a murder. Chase, insult or annoyance are MERE PLEASANTRIES. But observe:

"As that (real) crime was committed after the recent agitation had begun, it might reasonably be surmised that THE CRIMINAL WAS ATTRACTED TO THE PLACE BY THE REPORTS WHICH HE HAD READ."

Do you get the idea? Perhaps when one of these frightened young women fails to reach the dormitory some night, in her flight from the sort of Fenway degenerates we are told about, and a dreadful REAL crime is committed, we shall be told that it was ALL DUE TO THE NEWSPAPERS.

Another comment: Observe that the young woman in Mr. Police Commissioner's one REAL crime was, as he truly says, VISITING FROM ANOTHER CITY. May we fairly infer from this that young Boston women know enough to remain away from the place?

Still another: If the principal reason for not doing something to allay the fears of these girls and their teachers is that the installation of a patrol box will cost $2,500 in these municipal hard times, why not station a $1,500 policeman there, on FIXED POST?

Fathers and mothers all over the United States trustfully send their girls to Boston to be educated. In vigorous and progressive home rule communities they will not understand that the chief administrative officer of the BOSTON police department is designated for five-year terms at the State House by the STATE government.

What are these communities going to think of a great city which places $2,500 above the peace and security of its girl students?

Stephen O'Meara's letter, in our opinion, is a blow at the standing, prestige and continued success of Boston as a great educational centre. Once more the AMERICAN presumes to call the attention of the Chamber of Commerce to this phase of the scandal of the Fenway.

If there is nothing back of the Fenway trouble but girlish hysteria—and we have a feeling that there is much more back of it—and if the expenditure of $2,500 will allay that hysteria and encourage the directors of these great institutions, the money should be expended AT ONCE and without further literary effort in Pemberton square.

The United Improvement Association Needs More Members to Help Its Good Work

The United Improvement Association is campaigning for more members. The AMERICAN hopes that the campaign will be successful, because more members mean more influence for the association and more interest in public affairs among a greater number of people.

This organization is comprised of "twenty-one local improvement and civic associations, from all parts of the city, having a total membership of more than 6,000. Five delegates present each association in the central body. The organization concerns itself largely in building up and strengthening the activities of its constituent members and in centering their efforts upon vital problems having to do with the advance of the city."

It says of itself:

"The association also acts as a clearing house for exchange of news and for economy of effort, throwing the weight of the entire organization back of carefully studied and approved projects of the individual organizations and investigating and actively working for the solution of great civic problems of the city as a whole."

The association claims to have done much to advance the general interests of the Metropolitan District, and to its claims in this behalf the AMERICAN cheerfully subscribes.

It has rendered distinguished service in the matter of tele-

KISMET

God made her fair to come, her golden hair
Flicked high above a brow unfurrowed, white;
Her eyes blue lantern pools of color, where
The fires of life leap with a steady light.
And some who feel her shadow do but see
The tragic clasping of her pale white hands,
The weaving of her web of destiny
That pulls the universe at her demands.
And whether she is friend or foe to man,
Yielding him joy or sorrow, love or hate,
He spends a lifetime since the world began
Striving to read the misty eyes of Fate.

It was largely responsible for the investigation and the prosecution of those responsible for the high price of ice.

It has submitted to the consideration of the proper public authorities "a planned system of main thoroughfares for Boston" and its map was substantially adopted by the City Planning Board as "a basis for official action in development of the Boston street system."

There are a hundred other improvements in which this excellent association has had a hand. It deserves recognition and encouragement. The best way the citizens can recognize its merit is to join it and to participate in its endeavors.

Inklings and Thinkings

If you're tired, lie on your back, stick your feet in the air and wiggle your toes, advises a French army surgeon. Have never seen anyone but a baby that could wriggle his toes. Have you? And, anyway, we'd sooner keep on being tired.

Senator Martineau, of New Jersey, tells the Senate that the most nutritious grains and fruits are richest in alcohol and other wheat, rye, corn, oats, rice, grapes, peaches and—here's the one—apples. Always thought the Senator's native applejack was compact of things far above alcohol—brimstone, lightning, blue fire and some of those Jersey red poppers.

The U. S. Public Health Service has issued a bulletin advising citizens to remember their birthdays. Make a little jingle on your birth year, advises the bulletin, and gives this example:

In eighteen hundred and ninety-seven
Little Johnnie came from heaven.

Unfortunately for any of little Johnnie's poster relations who might have other opinions, there is no number that rhymes with the other place.

Politician advises U. S. to buy Mexico. Why not?—a man might buy a crate of wildcats if he had the money and the inclination.

Former Mayor Hart, 86, Offers Excellent Advice to the Ladies

Neither Patriotic Nor Economical, Mr. Hart Says, to "Go Without a Spring Dress This Year and Give the Money to Charity." Have TWO NEW DRESSES INSTEAD, Mr. Hart Recommends, and so Help Mill Workers, Salespeople, Dressmakers and Merchants

The Governor of Massachusetts has inaugurated a "Do-it-Now" movement.

Encouraged and supported by some of the best men and the noblest women in this neighborhood His Excellency seeks to provide IMMEDIATE relief for the unemployed by GIVING THEM WORK.

Thomas Norton Hart, in a Sunday AMERICAN interview which we urge upon the attention of EVERY Bostonian, says a splendid word for this "Work NOW" movement.

"I have been told," relates the venerable former Mayor, now in his eighty-seventh year, "of one prominent woman who urges her friends not to have new dresses this Spring, but to deny themselves and give the price of a new dress to FOREIGN RELIEF."

Former Mayor Hart truly declares that THIS IS ALL WRONG.

Mr. Hart points out, first, that while for those who are able it is well enough to CONTRIBUTE for foreign relief, the CHIEF duty of Americans is to look about them and BE SURE THAT THE MONEY IS NOT NEEDED AT HOME.

As to the go-without-a-new-Spring-dress program, Mr. Hart emphasizes its probable effect upon American dressmakers and American seamstresses and American mills.

Mr. Hart's advice is to have TWO Spring dresses and to have these made of home-made fabrics.

Mighty good advice, WE call it.

The Hart interview is by Mr. C. O'Connell Galvin, which is equivalent to saying that it has been carefully, as well as interestingly, put together.

The true story of how Harry Thaw was "personally conducted" back to New York by Jerome. Photographically depicted in tomorrow's Boston Sunday AMERICAN.

On a page of the Sunday AMERICAN, as interesting as it is important, Governor David I. Walsh explains in detail his inaugural message advocacy of a "State Correspondence School."

In the message Governor Walsh said:

A boy or girl ought not, merely because he or she is poor and obliged to go to work early in life, to be compelled to pay correspondence schools for getting the education necessary to fit him or her for a more profitable vocation. The State should give, through its own correspondence schools, free lecture courses, departmental demonstration work and other methods of university extension, all that private schools now supply to those able to pay for special instruction.

The editor of the Sunday AMERICAN invited His Excellency to discuss this unusual suggestion with our readers. The result is one of the most uplifting newspaper "specials" of the new year.

The Almeranti, one of the steamers of the United Fruit Company, is speeding Panama-Canalwards with Miss Grace Darling. And WHO is Miss Grace Darling?

Nobody in the United States, friends, will be asking THAT question two, three, four weeks from now.

Grace Darling is a young newspaper woman, employed by the Hearst newspapers. She is on her way from New York to the great Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco. On the way she will write entertainingly of the wonder trip of a wonder girl.

In the AMERICAN, from day to day, you may read the impressions of a young, observant and thoughtful writer. In moving picture theatres, moreover, you may see Grace Darling's journey illustrated, step by step, in the Hearst-Selig Pictorial.

Miss Darling's first story of her newspaper-moving picture expedition will appear tomorrow in the Sunday AMERICAN.

Monday will be Votes-for-Women Day at the State House. Monday will also be NO-Votes-for-Women Day at the State House.

In other words, the Massachusetts "Pro's" are about to debate again with the Massachusetts "Anti's."

Everything indicates that the Suffrage question will be submitted next Fall to the MALE voters of Massachusetts.

Last year's Legislature voted to so submit—the question. THIS action must be repeated by THIS year's Legislature in order to give the men a chance to say what they think.

The "Pro's" ask the 1915 lawmakers to repeat the good work of 1914. The position of the "Anti's" is that the "farce"—THEY call it a farce; WE do not—has "gone far enough."

A Sunday AMERICAN story tells how the forces are mobilizing—so to speak—for Mrs. Wilson's visit to Beacon Hill.

If you visited the Kermesse Flamande in aid of the Belgians, as you should have done, you were charmed by the appearance of young women in Boston society as MODELS, in the "model" gowns for Spring.

In the Society section of the Sunday AMERICAN—the best section of the kind carried by any Sunday newspaper in New England—will be printed a page of pictures of these charming Back Bay models.
